Brief Report

The Department of Law organized a workshop on Intellectual Property Rights (IPR). The session was attended by 30 people. Dr. Legha Mamta with practical and insightful experience, spoke about IPR and access to information and duplication has become very easy in today's digital age. Nowadays as soon as some goods are placed on the market, the related technical information loses its confidentiality. Such information is on the increase, and is often of very high proprietary value. If law leaves such information in the public domain without doing anything about it, all newly created information will instantly be imitated, and it will discourage people from creating anything new. The result will be that under such circumstances information will no longer function as an asset.

Important topics covered during the session:

- Protecting Intellectual Property
- Optimizing process
- Efficient use of IPR in the field of Research and Innovation
- How to safeguard your intellectual property?

Conclusion

The seminar ended with a lot of queries of students being answered successfully and the discussion made the students aware that not only inventing something new but protecting it is equally important for the development of the entrepreneur development skills.
